MOBBISSEY'S CONFIDENCE. In a recent conversation at Saratoga, Morrissey said he wanted the challenge to come from Heenan, as Heenan, having been defeated by Morrissey, onght, of course, to issue the defiance, and, added he, "If you've got any money to bet on the event, put it on me, and I'll win it for you." He continued: "I'am confident that I can lick this man. Sayers would have licked him easy, if he had fought him as I shall fight him. He can't stand bedy punishment, and I shall give him my head to hammer away at, while I make my fighting at his body. I can outstay him, and I'll win the fight, be sure of that. His hands will go in a little while, and then I can take him as I want to."

Morrissey is full of confidence, and wants only, as he says, once more to face his old antagonist on the turf, to teach him that be is still bis master. Morrissey has many friends, who are equally confident with him-In a recent conversation at Saratoga, Mor-

HEENAN'S CONDITION. On the other hand, the friends of Heenan have the most implicit confidence in their champlon, and will risk on him every dollar they can muster. Heenan himself is in admirable condition; he has entirely recovered from the disease that disabled him at Long Point, and is leading a sober and temperate life. He does not touch a drop of liquor, no matter how pressing may be the invitation of his friends. The constant exercise he has with Ottignon, Aaron Jones and Ed. Price—all sparrers of the first class—keeps him up to the topmost mark of pugilistic science. He learns something every day; for who could fail to improve under the instruction of constant experience with the most eminent professors of a given science that the On the other hand, the friends of Heenan nent professors of a given science that the day affords? He, though always a marvel of day affords? He, though always a marvet of quickness and sgility, becomes more and more quick and agile every day, his wind is improved by his constant exercise; and when he steps into the ring to fight Morrissey, he will prove by far the most formidable antagonist that veteran pugilist has ever yet put up his hands before. In a conversation with a friend, a few days since, Heenan said: "The next fight won't be a short fight. The next man that fights me has got to fight me three

In his former fight with Morrissey, Hee-nan's only hope was to knock his adversary out of time in three rounds, for he expressi stated to his backers that if he could no effect that consummation, he could not win. Accordingly, he expended all his energies on the The iron for the railroad from Mt. Probably no skull in the world, other than Morrissey's, could have received that tremendous pounding, and have recovered from it to answer to the call of "time." But Morrissey did recover, did of "time," But Morrissey did recover, did answer to the call, and Heenan failed, as he ommodity, that the world has entered into

A NUMERIATIST ROBBED.—Several days since the dwelling of Prof. A. J. Cleveland, Baltimore, was entered and robbed of a number of rare coins. The Professor has spent several years in collecting the coins, and his collection new numbered over 1,200 pieces, many of them of great antiquity, and valued because it is believed a duplicate of some of them is unknown. English Girsias in Indiana.—There is a bend of English Gipsies encamped about four miles below New Albany. They have about twenty by thirty horses in their posounts we have given of the institution in England known as the "Abode of Love," and which seems to have been conducted on the most liberal "free-love" system. The following account of an "occurrence" there is furnished by the West Counties Herald:

The latest seceder from the Agapemone the Rev. Lewis Price, is determined lose his wife and her fortune of lose his wife and her fortune of £6,000, without a struggle. Having freed himself from the thraldom and delusions of Henry James Price, the Welch curate is using his best exertions to free his lady also. Former watchings outside the house and grounds, with a policeman within hail to prevent a breach of the peace, having proved unavailing, Mr. Price made a bold attempt to get possession of his wife on Friday last, with the help of three stout men, not officers of the law.

On the night preceding the adventure he slept at the Lamb Inn, adjoining the institution of which he was formerly an inmate.

According to arrangement his three assistents arrived at Charlinch from Bridgewater in a fly, between four and five o'clock in the morning, their mission being to protect him from the fury of the Agapemonites. He forthwith scaled the gates, entered the grounds, and secreted himself near the conservatory, which he was aware Mrs. Price was accustomed to visit, his backers remaining in the roadway ready to obey his call.
Time wore on, and nothing particular transpired till about nine o'clock, when the watchers heard Mr. Price say several times,
"I will have you, Harriet!" This exclamation was followed by a piercing shriek of "murder" uttered by a female voice, and the

Here they were met by twenty or thirty persons, who stopped their further progress insisting that they had "no business on those premises," and is reply to their assertions that they had business there because they had heard some one crying "murder," ordered them off, and compelled them to return back to the road. They saw Mr. Price and Mrs. Price down upon the lawn, surrounded by some thirty or forty persons—men, women some thirty or forty persons—men, women and children.

In a few minutes Mr. Price himself was forcibly ejected, and the four invaders had to come away crest-fallen, their enterprise having failed. It appears that Mrs. Price was seen by her husband walking through the garden alone; he thereupon left his hiding-place and desired her to leave with him; she refused, and he seized her round the she refused, and he seized her round the waist to carry her away. Then it was that she cried out "murder," and threw herself upon the ground. As soon as the alarm was given the Agapemonites came out in full force with astonishing prompitude. Part of their number rushed to the gate to keep out the three men, and the others crowded round the husband and wife strangling on the grass. Several men, it is said, threw themselves upon Mr. Price, and it is further alleged that the Rev. Mr. Starkey knelt upon his chest and forced him to release his lady. After she had got from him he laid hold of her again, but was wrenched away, and turned out at the gate. Although a strong

APPEARANCE OF INDIA DURING THE WAR. An English historian, in describing the aspects of India during the time when the British Legions were passing on their path of conquest, states the following surprising

A feature worthy of notice during thes troublous times, was that the peasant and agriculturist continued their ordinary labor as though nothing in the world was afloat of greater moment than the seed they were sowing or the crop they were reaping. A battle might be fought in one field, and in another was the plowman with his plow and oxen. Occasionally we saw evidences of distrust in our route—a well-rope and a bucket and yoke clean and moist by the well, but no oxen, no attendant; a plow just in the loam, with the oxen hard by, but no

FAILURE OF THE MARYLAND FRUIT-CROP .-The Baltimore Sun Bays:

In this section of country there was hardly ever known a season when there was such a failure of the fruit crop as of the present. In the early summer there was a fair supply of strawberries, and with that single excep-tion, all the crops have failed. The protracted drouth destroyed the blackberries before they could mature, and the tree-fruits are so scarce as to be almost entirely unattainable. Peaches are sold at five to six dollars per bushel for those of a very ordinary quality, and plume, and apples, apricots and damsons are scarce, and held at such prices that few will renture to purchase even for ordinary family use.

A SURPRIED RUSTIC.—A verdant up-country genius, while inspecting the Navy Yard at Kittery, Maine, the other day, came across three loaded cannons, which are kept to sound an alarm in case of fire or accident. The percussion locks exciting his curiosity, he palled the trigger, when bang went the gun, blowing the fellow's vest half off, and scaring him tremendously. He concluded that he had "seen the clephant," and at once started for home.

A Lattle Boy Killed by a Dog.—A young son of Wm. Preston, residing in the town of Goodfarm, Ill., was killed by a dog last Wednesday. The dog was not a vicious one, and Mr. Preston can not account for his attack upon the child. AN ENTHUSIASTIC DOUGLASITE IN VIRGINIA

The Petersburg Express of late date says: As the early train was slowly departing from the Southern Depot, a big, burly coun-tryman came running down the Mount Airy grade, with fire in his eye, and terror in every lineament of his very excited looking "bold on—not to budge another inch." That faithful employe not knowing the cause of such unusual anxiety with a disinterested party, closed the valve, and quietly awaited the denouement. On rushed the alarmist, and leaping to the platform of the hindmost coach darted in like a streak of lightning, and cried out lustily, "where's Gen. Douglas?" Here, responded a passenger. Catching the "Little Giant" by the hand, he said "God bless you, General? I wouldn't have missed seeing you for a heap; here's my hand and here's my heart; bet your life that Darvill's is all right," and then bolted out more rapidly than when he entered. The passengers stored, and the Judge wondered where in the d—I was Darvill's, and would have been wondering still, had not a darky near, said "in Dunwoody, sar." His Lipe in the Arena.—Several years ago a circus company performed in Laneaster, N. H. While there, an intelligent and interesting lad attracted the attention of some members of the company, and they persuaded him to join them and become an equestrian. He went South and became an expert rider, and some time after, his brother found him in Natchez, Miss., and induced him to return to his parents, who were wealthy and highly respectable. The boy did so, and entered Dartmouth College, and was making rapid progress, when a circus company passed through Hanover. More Pro-SLAVERY IN Mississippi.—The citizens of West Point, Miss., held a meeting recently, to take action in the matter of a lot of Abolition documents found in a lot of trunks sold and shipped by a Mobile merchant to another of that place.
